Past participle future progressive

The future progressive time, also known as future continuous tension, is used to indicate a future event that will be in progress (or progressive). This construction requires the use of being, as well as the verb with an end-ing. It follows a general formula of will-to-be verb (ending with -ing). For example, children will walk to school. You can see how will be tells us it's a future event, and walking here indicates a continuous event. Let's take a look at some more future examples of progressive tension. Woman eating a salad In another article, we discuss verbs in the perfect progressive future time. But, now we know that there is another option to point to a continuous future: the future progressive time. Instead of saying, The dog will have eaten, you can say, The dog will eat. Again, it indicates future and continuous action. Let's think about the simple tense future. It follows a simple prediction, usually singular in the future. For example, I'm going to meditate in the morning. The future progressive time serves to prolong a futuristic activity. Thus, I will meditate (single example) becomes, I will meditate every morning (continuous activity). In a way, the future progressive time is used to make predictions. These may be infallible predictions. Maybe they're hopes and dreams. Here are some samples. In two months, I'll be eating a plant-based diet. By 3019, we'll be leading spaceships. In a year's time, he'll be asking for forgiveness. In an hour, we will fly over the Atlantic.By, so we will practice yoga every morning. Joanne will be coming home for the holidays. The amusement park will increase ticket prices later this year. Each of the examples above indicates statements that are declarative phrases. In other words, they are simply making a statement or, perhaps, answering a question. But the future progressive time can also be used to ask a question. The formula for these is 'subject' being 'verb (ending with -ing). Here are two examples: Are you going to eat a herbal diet in two months? Will he ask for forgiveness in a year? Will Joanne be home for the holidays? Will we be flying over the Atlantic soon? Will the amusement park increase ticket prices later this year? The future progressive time can also be used in the negative form to indicate that a continuous action will not take place in the future. The formula will read will be -not - be - verb (ending with -ing). Here are two examples: I won't be eating a herbal diet anytime soon. We will not be conducting spaceships in 3019.It will not ask for forgiveness in a year. Joanne's not coming home for the holidays. The amusement park will not increase the price of later this year. Verbs are not easy. They revolve around this sticky word: conjugation. Whatever language you learn, it's the hardest part of the process. Sometimes it takes memorization and practice for the heart; Other it just takes a little study time. Seeing examples always helps, however.
